

Search

What, No Reindeer? Santa's Flying Finnair This Year Instead

Sid Lipsey
December 2, 2014

Is Santa over the whole reindeer thing? (Photo: Finnair)

You think flying coach is uncomfortable? Try riding in a sleigh pulled by eight reindeer.

That's probably the reason Santa Claus has his own official airline, Finnair. And in keeping with the spirit of the season, the Finnish air carrier is decking the halls, and its aircraft, in holiday-flavored cheer.

Finnair workers deck the fuselage. (Photo: Finnair)

Finnair has decorated two of its Airbus 321 Sharklet aircraft with a holiday-themed look.

The airline has been Santa's official airline since 1983, when it partnered up with the Santa Claus Foundation to help spread holiday cheer. This season, Santa will board Finnair (sans reindeer) to visit kids and adults in China, Japan, Korea, and several European destinations.

Finnair also has a new video that blows the lid off of "Santa's Big Secret." (Spoiler: He may not be using the reindeer at all this Christmas!)

WATCH: Finnair & Santa's Secret

Let Yahoo Travel inspire you every day. Hang out with us on Facebook, Twitter, and Pinterest.

Be the first to comment.