5. Helsinki (HEL)

Readers' Rating: 71.174

Finland's main airport is a favored stopover point for fliers en route to Eastern Europe and Russia, with some of the fastest connecting times for transfer passengers in all of Europe. With its relatively small size—it handles around 15 million passengers a year—most of Helsinki's gates and services are located under one roof, where flag carrier Finnair offers saunas and spas at its premium lounges. The Nordic hub is also ranked among the most punctual in Europe, and a new train connection to St. Petersburg, which can be booked through Finnair, gives travelers another option for getting around.
