Off-season is often a great time to check off places on your bucket list at discounted prices. While St. Barts during its peak winter period may conjure up images of a budget made for billionaires on their superyachts, deals available right now are actually valid until mid-December. In fact, you can have your own villa for under $400 per night. Pricing on two-bedroom rentals can bring costs down to just over $250 per night for a couple. What's more, there is actually a fairly full calendar of ongoing events from now until August and again in November, including food, film, theatre and music festivals as well as tennis, fishing and soccer tournaments. September and October tend to be a bit slower as locals take vacations. As residents of a French overseas collective, they are entitled to five weeks a year.

St. Barth Properties this week released offers based on seven-night stays that include a Suzuki Jimny or Nissan March as part of the deal. Also included is in an in-villa dinner prepared by a private chef and other amenities not normally part of a high-season rental. The added value is worth over $500 alone, according to a spokesperson. Below is a selection of three villas where you can party like a the rock star on a more limited budget.

Villa Blue Diamond is a one-bedroom villa with two pavilions connected by a courtyard-style covered terrace. One pavilion houses a kitchen, a guest bath and living room. The bedroom is in the second pavilion and features a king sized bed; glass sliders provide access to the infinity pool. Prices for the Villa Blue Diamond start at $4,060 per week, including the car rental and other goodies (versus $6,370 high-season accommodations-only during high season).
